

TWO MISSING MEN RETURN HOME

Tinley Dairy Sued For $50,000

A suit for $50,000 damages filed last Thursday in Superior court against the Tinley Park Dairy, is the outgrowth of an accident last March which claimed the lives of Melvin and Lulu McClintock, Chicago, and resulted in injuries to May McClintock and Isabel Fogle, both of Chicago.

Administrators of the estates of Melvin and Lulu McClintock ask $10,000 damages each; Isabel Fogle asks $25,000 for injuries and May McClintock, $5,000 for injuries.

The accident occurred at the intersection of U. S. route 45 and Green Garden road near Frankfort, March 2nd of this year. Mrs. Fogle and her niece, May McClintock, 11 years old, were treated in Silver Cross hospital following the accident in which Mrs. Fogle's mother, Mrs. Lulu McClintock and Mrs. Fogle's brother Melvin McClintock, were killed.

A dairy truck belonging to the Tinley Park Dairy and driven by Leon Machtemes, 18 years old of Tinley Park, collided with the automobile of the Chicago people.

Worms at $3 Each Prove Expensive For Fisherman

Fish worms at the rate of $3 each makes pretty expensive fishing as was shown in the justice court of Judge J. C. Knight in Frankfort last Thursday when the case of Ronald Button against LaVerne Braun was heard. Both men reside in New Lenox. According to the testimony Mr. Button has posted his premises against trespassing and when he found Mr. Braun digging fish worms in a ravine near the Button home, he had him arrested for trespassing. Mr. Braun had dug four fish worms when he was arrested.

When the case was called Judge Knight pointed out that under a new law which went into effect in July 1939 the minimum fine for trespassing is set at $5 with a maximum of $50 and a jail sentence of six months. If any attorney appears in a case the maximum fine is frequently assessed. After the case had proceeded, Mr. Braun pled guilty and was fined $5 and assessed costs of $7, making a total of $12 which made the cost of the four fish worms come to $3 apiece.

According to Mr. Button the reason why his property is posted against trespassing is that people have been destructive going so far as to milk his cows and recently set fire to some dry brush in a ravine. People in New Lenox seeing the smoke rushed out to the place thinking the farm buildings were on fire. Mr. Button pointed out that while the intentions of the fire fighters was good, much of his garden and corn was needlessly trampled.

On the other hand there is great resentment in New Lenox against the action of Mr. Button on the ground that New Lenox fishermen have dug fish worms on the Button premises for years without any one objecting. They feel if a stranger had been prosecuted instead of a home town man, the matter would appear in a different light.

New Lenox fishermen say: "Be aware, dig your fish worms any place but New Lenox."

Mr. Braun is a new bridegroom and the expensive fish worms are rather tough.

Republicans Hold Big Picnic

Several thousand persons attended the annual Republican picnic on Wednesday afternoon and evening at the cottage of Paul Schoene on the Kankakee river.

State and county candidates were in attendance. Republican officers in the court house in Joliet closed at noon to allow their employees to go to the outing.

A. F. Schupp, county chairman, estimated that in excess of 10,000 persons attended the picnic.

Refreshments were served by Mr. Schoene.

Picnic Successful

The recent picnic given by the Frankfort Fire Department in the Frankfort Grove was a most successful affair financially. Receipts totaled over $2300 and nearly $1000 was cleared for the fire department.

Why Compulsory Military Training?

By Billy Krieg

Soon the male population from the ages of 18 to 45 will be marching in goose steps toward a European war. These won't be VOLUNTARY AND SPONTANEOUS BUT COMPULSORY. The men and boys will have nothing to say about whether or not they want to kill their fellow man—they will be compelled to train to be murderers. What results will such a program achieve? Will military dictatorship by army officers differ in any way from total dictatorship? This one act will destroy the ideals created by the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. Did those valiant men, fighting for a great cause, die in vain? We, the people of this country will have nothing to say whether or not we want to train to be murderers. What advantages will compulsory military service give that couldn't be achieved thru voluntary service? We could have 300,000 men in our regular army and an auxiliary corps of all who wished the training and study regardless of physical requirements. There are a great many things this auxiliary corps could do that needs no physical requirements. This should be made into an efficient army for defense of our country and capable of moving to any point in the U. S. within 2 days. The army doesn't need more men—they need efficiency and equipment. They need training in mass movement for defense and not every man able to carry a gun.

And no army could ever conquer the free spirit of the American people unless we are undermined by such things as these. Regimented people are conquered by armies.

What will be the results of this compulsory military training? What will be the cost of such a thing? Men will have to leave private employment and established jobs to come back to nothing. They will have to start building their lives over again. One man is never so important that another couldn't take his place. What will become of the wives, children and mothers? Will a wife and six children be required to exist on five dollars a month because there is a war in Europe at the present time? This isn't democracy. What will military training give to those men? The only advantage I've heard claimed was discipline. But what advantage is MILITARY discipline in civilian life? It is all right for dictatorial countries that exist because of their armies but we live in a DEMOCRACY. Let us prepare to protect our homes, but let's do it voluntarily, not regiment every male as in dictatorial countries. Remember FREE PEOPLE AREN'T CONQUERED BY ARMIES OR RULED BY ARMIES and if you don't think so, look up the history of Ireland. LET'S SAVE THE AMERICA'S FOR DEMOCRACY BY KEEPING A EUROPEAN WAR IN EUROPE AND OUR BOYS HERE TO PROTECT OUR HOMES.

Marti-Thompson Family Reunion

Sunday July 21st the families of the late Nicholas Marti, Sr., of Mokena and W. S. Thompson of Chicago spent a felicitous day at the Old Hickory Creek.

The close friendship of these two families was brought about during the time of the old fashioned way of shipping milk to the retail dealers. Mr. Marti shipped milk to Mr. Thompson for fifteen consecutive years.

Many Mokena friends will remember them as the Thompson girls came to the Marti home every summer for a vacation.

A sumptuous lunch was served at one o'clock underneath a big oak tree. Every dish was in order from soup to desert. This group prided themselves to be able to indulge in such a costly and delicious dish as turtle chowder which was prepared by Mrs. Donald Maue. The diversions of the day were fishing, ball games, singing, wading, etc.

Those present were: Mrs. Caroline Marti, the oldest member present and baby Duane James Maue, great grandson of Mrs. Marti, the youngest member present; Miss Jessie Glen of Englewood, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Maue, Mokena; Mrs. Mary Vernon and daughter Agnes and son Russell, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Marti, and daughters Marjorie and Corinne of Mokena; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Aspel and son Eugene, Joliet; Mrs. Pearl Werner, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lowe and daughter Ruth Mokena. After the party the group motored to the Marti farm where sometime was spent recalling many past and happy memories. Then all departed for their homes agreeing to make this re-union an annual affair.

German Festival Successful Affair

Several thousand people attended the fifth annual German Day and Folk Festival held in the Frankfort Grove on Keane Ave., near Frankfort Sunday afternoon and evening.

The Mokena and Frankfort bands played and a sound truck also furnished music. There were all kinds of games and contests with a plentiful serving of the famous Thueringer sausage and sauer kraut.

During the afternoon Otto Ehtor editor and publisher of the German American presided as chairman.

Addresses were made by Gustave Brandt former city treasurer of Chicago and by Mr. Ehtor. Mayor Kelly of Chicago extended his greetings to the gathering thru Mr. Brandt.

In the evening there was a balloon parade for the little folks. Dancing was the chief diversion of the evening.

The festival was very orderly and no incidents occurred to mar the happy occasion.

Those in attendance came from many of the surrounding towns, also from Joliet and Chicago. Crete was the most eastern part of Will County represented.

All in all the festival was a decided success.

Orland Election Goes Over 2 to 1

Orland Park voters approved by almost 2 to 1, the Village Board's action in issuing $4,500, ten year 4 percent bonds to finance the Villages' share of the proposed reconstruction of the Oak Street Viaduct under the tracks of the Wabash railway and construct approaches and walks.

The Wabash has advised the Board that they would like to do the work at the same time that their trains are slowed down due to the rebuilding of the Keane Ave. viaduct by the State. This will be done this fall.

Mayor Kollman and the Board appreciate the confidence shown by the voters in approving their efforts to improve the subway which has long been a disgrace both to the railroad and the village and unsafe for all using it. The Illinois Commerce Commission has already given their approval to the plans for the bridge which will be 84 feet long and of concrete and steel construction with provision for sidewalks on both sides of the 22 foot clear roadway.

Public Hearing

LEGAL NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS ON PROPOSED MOKENA ZONE ORDINANCE.

Notice is hereby given that Public Hearing will be held on a tentative report and proposed zoning ordinance pertaining to all property located within the limits of the Village of Mokena, Illinois, which report and ordinance have been prepared by the Zoning Commission appointed by the Mayor and Board of Trustees of said Village, pursuant to an act of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois in relation to municipal zoning.

Said public hearing will be held in the Village Hall, Mokena, Illinois on Aug. 12, 1940 at 7:30 p. m. All persons interested should attend and will be given an opportunity to be heard. Copies of the proposed zoning ordinance, including the text and map and tentative report, are accessible for examination by interested parties at the Village Hall. MOKENA ZONING COMMISSION, Harold Spiess, Raymond McGuire, C. S. Nebeker, J. G. Oswald, L. Warning.

Over two hundred men and local Mokena Boy Scouts scoured the fields, highways, railroad right of way and timberland in the vicinity of Mokena Wednesday morning and afternoon up to evening in a vain attempt to find Emil D. Cappel, Frankfort Township Commissioner who mysteriously vanished from his farm home east of Mokena during Tuesday night.

When Mrs. Cappel arose shortly before six o'clock Wednesday morning to get the family breakfast, she did not see Mr. Cappel around the place. Search failed to locate him. Relatives, friends and neighbors were notified and the search was on. Soon large groups of men and boys were combing every inch of territory about Mokena for the missing man. News of his disappearance was broadcasted from radio station WC LS and WLS while the newspapers carried an account of the strange disappearance. The Will County Sheriff's office was notified and deputies assisted in the search.

As the day drew on toward night there was still no trace. A large group of men had gathered in the Cappel farm yard that evening to discuss further plans for continuing the search, when suddenly about 9:30 o'clock, Mr. Cappel electrified the group by walking into the farm yard. He, too, was much surprised to see so many autos and people in his farm yard and asked the reason why they were there.

Dr. E. G. MacMahon of Mokena was summoned and gave Mr. Cappel medical attention. It is presumed a sudden attack of amnesia was the cause of Mr. Cappel's strange disappearance.

Later Mr. Cappel told members of his family that he had been unable to rest Tuesday night due to the heat. He arose put on his overalls and bedroom slippers and walked out doors. The next thing, he remembered was that he was lost in a woods and fell asleep. Toward evening he awoke and saw the red lights blinking on the WLS radio tower on Keane avenue a short distance north of his farm. Not knowing just exactly where he was he followed the radio tower lights by cutting thru fields until he reached his farm. Mr. Cappel told his family if it had not been for the WLS radio tower lights he might not have been able to get back home.

Mr. Cappel is a very popular man as was attested by the many offers of help which poured in all day long from Joliet and surrounding towns.

He had been working hard cutting oats Tuesday and the intense heat is thought to have brought on the sudden attack of amnesia. At latest reports he is improving nicely.

CARD OF THANKS

We most heartily thank our relatives, friends, neighbors and Boy Scouts for their many acts of kindness and assistance given us during the past few days.

U. S. Army's 'Blitzkrieg' Maneuvers Will Train Biggest Peace-Time Force

By MILTON R. KENTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

AMERICA will be struck by a "blitzkrieg" in August as troops mobilize throughout the country for the biggest war maneuvers in peacetime history.

Army experts are determined that no invading armies shall sweep across this country as they swept through many European nations. To meet this challenge more than 310,000 members of the regular army, National Guard, and Reserve corps are being called to the colors for intensive training under actual conditions of warfare.

New methods of war will be tried out in four sections of the country. More than 100,000 troops from 12 states will gather near Plattsburg, N. Y., from August 5 to 25 to prepare for an invasion coming up the St. Lawrence river valley.

Biggest 'War Area.'

Other large armies will mobilize in Louisiana, Minnesota and Washington from August 4 to 24. At Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, 65,000 troops will put into practice all the new methods of modern warfare from "panzer" divisions to foot infantry for three weeks beginning August 11 on a 1,000 square mile battlefield. This will be the biggest of the "war" areas.

American military authorities do not believe that the great success of the German army resulted solely from the use of dive bombers and massed tanks. They point out that while these are important, the human machine of flesh and blood is still the ultimate factor in battle. They refuse to put sole reliance on mechanized divisions, but believe that soldiers armed with rifles and machine guns are still indispensable.

Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, who will be in charge at Camp McCoy, declared that "despite talk of streamlined tactics and the large number of trucks and passenger cars available during these concentrations, doughboys will still fight on foot and must be able to march. Annihilation ensues when a motor convoy of troops is caught under artillery fire and air bombs. Areas of from 6 to 10 miles from the front line are within artillery range and must be covered on foot in approach march formations."

Mechanization Vital.

Motorized and mechanized divisions are not being neglected, however. More than 7,500 motorized units will participate in the Wisconsin maneuvers. Equally large numbers of mechanized units will participate in the other camps. Even this large number of motor vehicles does not mean that horses have been entirely replaced, because about two thousand animals are used in the Fifty-third and Fifty-fourth National Nationwide U. S. army maneuvers testing the latest developments in "blitzkrieg" warfare will call 310,000 men to the colors during August. Above are shown Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, recently appointed commander of the army's first big scale Panzer corps.

Guard Cavalry brigades. The artillery and supply units are entirely motorized; some of the units changed over from horses and mules within the past few months.

No army can succeed unless it is directed intelligently by well-trained officers. The movement of troops has been a problem of tremendous importance to commanders of all ranks throughout military history. Valuable experience in directing this movement will be given officers in charge of maneuvers in all parts of the country. Officers in charge of these maneuvers have been thoroughly schooled in solving logistical problems dealing with movement of troops, supply and evacuation.

Every method of transportation except hiking will be used in effecting the concentration at the various camps. Units will arrive by air, motor and rail at the rate of 75 detachments each 24 hours during the three days the army will be concentrating at Camp McCoy.

One of the more spectacular movements will be the march of the mechanized Seventh Cavalry brigade for 560 miles over the highways from Fort Knox, Ky., to Camp McCoy. The brigade will form a column of more than 1,000 vehicles approximately 60 miles long. Brig. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, commander of the brigade, was recently named commander of the army's first big scale panzer corps.

The column will be composed of almost every kind of vehicle used in a modern army. There will be 400 combat cars similar to the light infantry tank, mobile machine shops, half track prime movers to tow 75 mm. howitzers, gasoline tank trucks, 40 scout cars and a large number of infantry tanks.

Problems Involved.

An army officer explained that transporting large numbers of troops to a point of concentration presented just a few more problems than finding cars for a Sunday School picnic. A total of 30,000 troops will move to Wisconsin maneuvers by 150 motor convoys. They will bivouac overnight where necessary. The troops moving by rail will be carried on 78 regular and special trains. No stops will be made for meals, but the men will be served from field kitchens set up in the baggage cars. In addition to this, about 1,200 tons of National Guard equipment, including tanks, combat cars and ambulances, will be transported by rail from more than 300 different stations.

It is estimated that by the time the maneuvers have ended, each vehicle will have traveled 1,250 miles. More than a million gallons of gasoline will have been burned. If this fuel were concentrated at one point, 135 railroad tank cars would be required to hold it.

Even though modern troops are carried in transport trucks, military experts still believe that an army marches on its stomach. American soldiers, long known as the best-fed in the world, still receive three square meals a day, every day during the maneuvers.

But chefs working in 766 separate kitchens at Camp McCoy will be allowed to spend only 38½ cents daily for supplies to feed each soldier. The small allowance is "stretched" a long way through the purchase of such small quantities of food as 1,250,000 eggs, 273,500 pounds of sugar, 37,900 pounds of salt, 190,000 lemons and 16 tons of corned beef. During the three week period, the army in Wisconsin will also eat 85 tons of fresh beef, a carload of hot dogs, 12 tons of macaroni and a carload of roasting chickens.

'Real Operations.'

Plans have been carefully laid to provide for efficient handling of the food supply. "The entire supply system will function exactly as in real operations," General Ford stated. "This phase of the training will be extremely important. The ration is ample, menus are balanced and well diversified."

The war maneuvers will provide the best opportunity the army has had to try out its newly motorized equipment on a large scale. While individual units have received considerable experience, this will be the first time that all the units attending the maneuvers have operated together under battle conditions.

"Operating a military motor convoy of hundreds of vehicles at night without lights requires special training," General Ford explained. "It is possible that during the Wisconsin maneuvers the state of this special training may prove to be a vital factor in the success of tactical motor movements."

"The 1,000 square mile maneuver area will permit mechanized units to operate in wide encircling raids exactly as they do in real operations."

Commanding generals in the field often become lost in the "fog of war" without constant communication with other units engaging in the battle. To prevent this situation, special attention is being given to rapid communications. Approximately 2,000 miles of wire will be laid in the Wisconsin battlefield alone, connecting 3,000 telephones during the grand concluding maneuver. This equipment will mark a new development in telephony because the wires are used for simultaneous transmission of telephone and code telegraphy messages.

Railroads are trying to prevent a car shortage as a result of war export bottleneck . . . Rushing the war tax bill good politics but bad economics.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—One of the worst bottlenecks in the World War of 1914-18, and one which contributed in no small measure to the eventual taking over of the railroads by the government, was due simply to the fact that shippers and receivers of freight alike used railroad cars for storage purposes.

The railroad executives are very much worried about the possibilities now, and are determined to do everything they can to prevent a critical situation. The last thing they want is another spell of government operation.

In the last war the worst spot was at the ports. At Jersey City and Hoboken, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Newport News, the entire railroad yards were packed with cars loaded with freight for export, freight which could not be loaded, and freight which so clogged the yards that they virtually put the railroads out of business. There was no use hauling trains to any port. There would be no place to park the cars after they got there.

A natural sequence was that there developed a shortage of cars. Naturally if cars are held in yards, loaded, but with no place to put their contents, they cannot also be out on the road hauling the freight. So there were not enough cars.

SHORTAGE THREATENS

This situation is approaching again. This time the first bad effect is not so noticeable in the ports as in the sources of supply—around the coal mine heads, and at the plants producing goods for export.

Yet one would think, because of the necessities of the convoy system, that the situation in the ports would be worse. But the convoys do not start from American ports. The ships sail up to a certain port in Canada, and the convoys are organized from there. This slightly improves the situations at the American ports, though this also might easily become serious.

But more than 41,000 cars loaded with coal and unconsigned are now being held around United States coal mines, according to the car service division of the Association of American Railroads.

"Although coal loading is now more than 20 per cent above that of the corresponding period of 1939," the association said, "there is no shortage of cars and none is anticipated."

BAD ECONOMICS

Rushing the war profits tax bill through congress now is excellent politics, better psychology, but bad economics. Actually it would have been much better to follow the original plan, which was to make a careful study of the whole situation in the months that intervene before the new congress convenes in January. Then a bill would have been all prepared, and it would have been considered by a congress in which the individual legislators would not have to face an election for 18 months. All the "bugs" and jokers which can possibly be seen in advance in any piece of legislation would have been caught and rectified. In short, the bill would be as good as can be expected from any such unwieldy groups as compose the house and senate.

The tax on heavy profits could have been applied to 1940 earnings and hence have produced as much revenue as a bill enacted now. True, it is a little advantage to business men to know just what the tax will be, when they still have before them something like five months of the year the earnings of which will be taxed. It gives them a chance to trim their sails a little.

SOME OBJECTIONS

The objections to framing the law now of course are that in the desire to take every possible dollar of war profit, congress may easily do things which impair tremendously the efficiency of our national defense. The law can easily be such that it will deter individuals and corporations from switching from their normal line to things that the government needs.

It is not a case of patriotism. Very little evidence is before the national defense commission now, nor did it develop in the first World War, that manufacturers declined to do things necessary to the national defense because of any tax situation. That is not the type of thing that is feared from an unscientific war profits tax. What can happen now and what did happen in the last war is that there is a certain discouragement of supply sources. For instance, A might have a very smart idea which would be valuable to the production of war supplies. A might be a man never thought of by the war or navy departments, or by the national defense commission experts. He might study the idea, and decide that it was too risky. He would be almost certain to lose money even if the idea worked. It would be a total loss if it did not work.

Rickenbacker's Prediction In 1930 Almost True Today

"I'm no prophet!" That's what World War Ace Eddie Rickenbacker would probably say if he were asked what's going to happen 10 years from now. Nevertheless, 10 years ago he made an amazing prediction.

In 1930, there was no commercial passenger aircraft from coast to coast in the U. S. None at all. On April 27, 1930, nevertheless, Captain Rickenbacker made this prediction: "We will make coast-to-coast air-plane trips in 1940 in 10 hours. Cruising speeds of 250 miles an hour will be common."

And he almost hit the nail on the head. And unlike most predictions, it came true.

"Stratosphere" flying between the coasts on a schedule of 13 hours and 40 minutes began on regular schedule during July of this year.

Actually only 11 hours and 45 minutes were required by the new "stratoliner" on its maiden flight, July 9. The pilot disregarded the schedule that had been so carefully planned and "let the ponies run." By forcing the plane and missing two of the scheduled three stops, he cut more than an hour off the previous coast-to-coast record. Before the new service was started, normal commercial flying time was 15 hours and 42 minutes.

15 Passengers Aboard.

The stratoliner fought headwinds part of the way to cruise 248 miles an hour on the inaugural flight. One stop was made in Kansas City where the plane took on 1,500 gallons of gasoline. The trip was made with a full commercial load of 15 passengers, including some movie stars (of course!) and a crew of three.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, whose prediction in 1930 of a 10-hour coast-to-coast air service in 1940 is almost true.

Captain Rickenbacker's statement forecasting this great advance in aviation was printed in the Washington (D. C.) Sunday Star on April 27, 1930.

Though Rickenbacker had made his prediction when there was no coast-to-coast air passenger service, six months later the first of such commercial flights took place. These flights were still a far cry from his prediction. The then newly organized Transcontinental and Western Air Line proudly announced that their planes would fly passengers across the continent in only 36 hours.

The prediction was based upon sound reasoning, and not upon "super-optimism" or a desire for notoriety.

SPANKED WIVES
Sioux City, S. D., has the distinction (perhaps dubious) of a new organization called the Spanked Wives Club. According to Mrs. Lora Lane, the club's leader, the aims of the organization are based on a happier home life. The club is made up of wives who got spanked by their husbands when they needed it, Mrs. Lane says. "Our husbands don't beat us, they just spank us," she says.

THE STORY THUS FAR

Lynn Morrow, beautiful blonde New York girl, is stranded in Palm Beach in her bathing suit with only 50 cents when her employer, Mrs. Helen Warren, disappears with car and trailer from a camp where she, Buddy, her son, and Lynn had been living. A note from Mrs. Warren advises Lynn to call at her New York attorney's office for her clothes and wages. She is rescued by Terry McNair, who she met at the beach. She goes to his home, where he has a maid provide her with some of his sister's evening clothes. They then go to a beach club. His sister appears and a quarrel ensues. Lynn accepts the help of a stranger to escape. He takes her to his home where, he identifies himself as Raymond (Wit) Austin. He accuses her of trying to blackmail him. Greatly incensed, Lynn flees. Stopping at a coffee shop, she meets a young artist, Rene Bouchier, who is returning to New York by trailer and offers to take her there. They enjoy roughing it along the road. She finds Rene to be a decent sort of a fellow. Lynn tells Rene her story. He knows McNair and Austin as moneyed playboys. The car breaks down. They are forced to stay at the Lovell farmhouse during repairs, the Lovells believing them newlyweds.

When Rene came in later Lynn was still laughing.

"Wasn't it priceless?"

"It was! I begin work tomorrow."

"Are you serious?"

"I was never more serious in my life." He slumped on to the sofa.

"Lynn, that car's a mess. Just about everything is wrong with it. The last guy who tinkered with it certainly fixed it! The bill is going to be at least $40. That will take all our cash."

"Oh, Rene!"

"Now don't worry. The old boy said he'd give me $5 if I'd paint the garage two coats. I can do it in two days."

"But, Rene—"

"We'll manage somehow."

"Rene—" Lynn did not know how to begin.

"I know what you're going to say. Yes, he thought we were married, and I let him think so. I never dreamed we'd be stuck here. There was nothing else to do, Lynn. They'd never understand."

"I don't suppose anybody else would, either."

"Of course, they would, if they knew you!" Lynn then suggested she write to Mrs. Warren's lawyer and ask for her money.

"Maybe I should tell him to wire it? What do you think?"

"It will cost money to do that, but maybe it is better than being stranded."

So that is the way it was left. Mortimer was to wire the money to Lynn to the Western Union office in Lu Lu, the nearest town.

Bright and early the next morning Rene was up and at his painting. Lynn waited until the hired man was going to town and sent her letter in by him to be mailed. And there was nothing to do but for the two young people to hope for the best. Mrs. Lovell came to call on her in the morning.

"Why don't you folks come up to the house and eat with us? It will save you money, and my husband tells me you are a little hard up. You can help me with the work."

Obediently Lynn went up to the big farmhouse. That morning she helped Mrs. Lovell clean an upstairs bedroom. Mrs. Lovell gave her a couple of cotton dresses, for which Lynn was grateful, and she wore one of them to the dinner table.

Of course, there was the dreaded conversation always. Lynn finally told Mrs. Lovell she and Rene had been married in Florida. That seemed simplest.

All in all, the day went smoothly enough, although Lynn was exhausted when night came. She came back to the trailer after dark and found Rene there, the curtain up, their beds made.

"Did Mr. Lovell ask you where we were married today?" Lynn called.

"Lord, did she ask you, too?"

"I said Florida."

"I said New York!" Rene groaned. "I'm a fool."

CHAPTER VI

Lynn and Rene would not have been so confident of their situation if they could have seen ahead. On the second day, Rene was finishing up the paint job.

All day there was a stream of farmers' wives and sometimes their husbands from neighboring farms who wanted to look through "Mr. and Mrs. Bouchier's trailer."

Once when Lynn came into the living room unexpectedly the conversation stopped with telling suddenness. She knew they had been discussing her.

One of the neighbors was driving into the village of Lu Lu and Lynn went along to see whether there was any word yet from New York. Until the moment when she walked into the telegraph office she did not think about the complications which might arise, since she'd naturally given her own name to Mr. Mortimer when she wrote. But only the operator was in the place, so Lynn did not worry. There was no message for her.

By the third day both Lynn and Rene were discouraged. The car was done, the bill would be $50. With what Rene had earned they could just about pay it. But where was money coming from for gas and oil and food on the rest of the trip?

When she heard Rene talking to somebody she came to the doorway.

"That your wife?" the garage man asked. "She's real pretty."

Rene nodded without enthusiasm.

"By George! You say you paint pictures, too? How about painting a picture of her here by the trailer? I would like it for my garage window."

Rene shrank a little. The garage he did not mind, but painting a picture to put in the window of a country garage was something else again.

"Tell you what I'll do," seeing Rene's reluctance. "I'll cut a third off your garage bill."

"I'll paint it." Rene's voice was sharp as he spoke. "How big do you want it?"

"Pretty big—like this," he said, motioning a five-foot canvas with his hands. "When can you have it done?"

"Tonight, within two hours," Rene said crisply.

"We're going to paint your picture for Mr. Wells," he said to Lynn.

Lynn meekly took up her pose near the door of the trailer as Rene directed. Grimly, Rene began to paint.

Gradually a crowd began to gather.

Had Lynn not felt so sorry for Rene she would have liked to laugh. It was all so absurd. Rene painted for an hour. The picture took shape, a pretty calendar-like picture.

"I am doing this in the memory of the girl I lost."

"Can I take it tonight?" asked Wells.

"It's wet, better leave it till morning. You can get it when you bring the car out."

Gradually the crowd dispersed.

It was when the two were doing the supper dishes that Mrs. Lovell exploded the bombshell.

"If my daughter had lived she'd have been about your age," she said, and tears came to the woman's eyes.

"I'm sorry, I didn't know."

"I wanted to tell you that before you heard what I'm going to say. You and Mr. Bouchier aren't married are you?"

Lynn could find no words with which to answer.

"I sensed it all along. You didn't wear a wedding ring which was funny for a bride. Mr. Lovell told me to mind my own business. But I kept thinking of Nancy, and I just couldn't bear to think of you going around the country this way."

"But Mrs. Lovell, you don't understand—"

"I know. I know what you're going to say, but I know best. Mr. Lovell is going to speak to you—to Mr. Bouchier tonight."

"Oh, please, Mrs. Lovell. You've been so kind to us, I wish—" Lynn found it hard to face Mrs. Lovell's honest, sincere gaze. The poor woman was deeply hurt.

"But Mrs. Lovell, Rene has been kind to me, he's taking me back to New York. You must understand our friendship is purely platonic—"

Mrs. Lovell held up her hand. "It doesn't help any to call it high fangled names, my dear. You're too nice a girl. Father is going to bring that man to his senses." She patted Lynn's arm, reassuringly. "He's going to see that Rene marries you."

Aghast, Lynn turned around and stared.

"But, I don't want to marry him—oh, please, Mrs. Lovell! Let us alone. This is something you know nothing about—"

"And me married for thirty-five years? My dear girl! Come, now, I know you must care for a lot—"

She went on and on until in despair Lynn ran out of the kitchen, down to the trailer. Rene was not there, and Lynn threw herself on the sofa and wept. Thus it was Rene finally found her. He stepped into the trailer, slammed the door.

"My God, Lynn! Stop crying! I don't know what to do. Do you know what that old fool threatens to do? He says he'll have the law on us if we're not married tomorrow!" Rene slumped into a chair.

"That's what he called it, 'having the law on us.' Lynn, I feel terrible. Here we have the money to get out of here, and then this happens!"

Lynn tried to control her sobbing.

"What shall we do?"

"Get that car, hook it on and run for it."

"We couldn't, they'd know and stop us!"

There was no sleep for Rene that night. He could see no way out. Even the morning light brought little help. Lynn, when she awakened and remembered, she called out to Rene:

"Did you think of anything?"

"Only of something called a shotgun wedding!"

Then on either side of that gingham curtain they laughed hysterically.

"The only thing left is for this darned trailer to burn down!" Rene remarked.

Before they were through breakfast Lovell came to the door. He came in evidently embarrassed.

"Mrs. Lovell wants me to take you to town now to get the license."

Lynn, pleadingly, turned toward him. "Will you give us just a little more time?" she begged.

"I'll wait outside," he said firmly. As he waited on guard the girl and the man looked at each other helplessly.

"No."

"All right, then. If it makes them happy, we'll have to get married."

He came over to the girl. "I swear I'll never make any demands on you and just as soon as I get a little money I'll see you have a divorce. Nobody need know."

Lynn grasped at a straw: "We'll go and get the license, Rene. Then we can stop at the telegraph office. If that money has come from Mr. Mortimer, then I'll hide some place until the bus comes along."

When Lovell came back into the trailer they were both silent. "I hate to get mixed up in your affairs, children, but you see Mother feels pretty strongly." He turned severely to Rene. "She's making you marry her for the girl's own good. My child, you'll be glad some day you met us and did not go on your way in sin."

Rene groaned and Lynn did not dare meet his eyes. In an hour they were ready and Lovell drove them to the County Clerk's office. Rene was nervous and his hand shook as he signed his name, and Lynn had a hard time to keep the tears back.

At the telegraph office she went in and asked about a wire. The girl handed it to her. It read:

"Report to me immediately on arriving in New York. Will pay you then." Signed Mortimer.

CHAPTER VII

When they got back to the farm there was a car beside the back porch.

"That's the parson," Lovell said. "I want to see Mrs. Lovell," Lynn said. "Let me talk to her alone."

Lynn went inside the house and was introduced to the minister. The Rev. Mr. Hoffman smiled pityingly on the erring girl, and Lynn was wild with a helpless fury. The kindly old man talked to her as you might talk to someone who was very ill, had just escaped death.

"May I see you just a moment, Mrs. Lovell—before—" Lynn could not complete the sentence.

Mrs. Lovell, kindly severe, ushered Lynn into her austere bedroom. Lynn, her back to the closed door, was desperate.

"Mrs. Lovell, you don't realize what you're doing. I don't love Rene and he doesn't love me! Please understand that."

Mrs. Lovell looked horrified. "Of course he loves you, my child. I know love when I see it. When a man wipes dishes for you, that's love. Now when I was first married, Mr. Lovell—"

"Please—listen to me. I never saw Rene before until early this week. I've known him since Monday. We're not sweethearts—"

Mrs. Lovell took off her glasses and wiped them. It was plain she was shocked beyond measure.

"If that is the case, my child, it is certainly a blessing you fell into my hands. If I had an erring daughter I'd want some good woman to do the same for me!" She cleared her throat. "There will come a time when you'll thank me. I am doing this in the memory of the girl I lost!" She was silent, and, to Lynn's horror, Mrs. Lovell began to pray.

Lynn had no weapon for such simple faith.

In a daze Rene and Lynn, each equally desperate, heard the beginning of the marriage service. In the middle of it Lynn heard Mr. Lovell whispering to his wife that he'd got a wedding ring at the 10-cent store when he was in town. Two minutes later it was over and Lynn had the cheap gold ring on her left finger.

She caught a glimpse of Rene's face and he was furious.

"Kiss your wife, my son," said the Rev. Hoffman.

Rene pecked at Lynn's cheek. Mrs. Lovell was crying into her pocket handkerchief. She took Lynn into her arms and wept over her. Then the Rev. Hoffman read them a long lecture about morality. He gave Lynn the marriage certificate, carefully made out, with a triumphant flourish. It was while all this was going on that Wells drove into the yard with their car.

HITLER AND NAPOLEON

("Hitler Visits Tomb of Napoleon.")—headline

Napoleon—Stop staring at me! Hitler—I'm not staring at you; I'm looking at what I thought was a reflection.

Napoleon—Go away. I'm tired of tourists.

Hitler—I'm no tourist.

Napoleon—Who are you?

Hitler—I'm the new landlord.

Napoleon—You are joking.

Hitler—That's what a lot of people thought. Listen, Nappie, it's time you and I met. We have everything in common. We are two of a type.

Napoleon—Do you realize you are talking to the most famous conqueror in history?

Hitler—That's the very question I was going to ask you. You were good for your time, but you're out-classed.

Napoleon—By whom, may I ask?

Hitler—Even if you didn't ask, I'd still tell you. By me!

Napoleon—Who are you?

Hitler—I am Adolf Hitler.

Napoleon—Hitler? Hitler? I once knew a sausage maker named Hitler.

Hitler—I am the conqueror of most of Europe. In two years I have taken nine nations.

Napoleon (bored)—I wish I knew what you smoked.

Hitler—In two months I took Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland and France.

Napoleon—Nobody ever takes France. It's purely an illusion.

Hitler—Believe it or not, I have captured France.

Napoleon (derisively)—You and who else?

Hitler—Paris is mine. This tomb is mine. I even own you. Think of it, Napoleon the Great now under the ownership of Adolf Hitler!

Napoleon (wincing)—As if I hadn't suffered enough during those years at St. Helena! Bah, the world must be softening up. You don't look like a conqueror.

Hitler—You don't look any too hot yourself.

Napoleon—Go on with your story. You say you have conquered nine nations?

Hitler—I have the world at my feet.

Napoleon—That's what I was crazy enough to think once! Remember it's only a short trip from your feet to your throat.

Hitler—And do you know what I am going to do next? I am going to capture England!

Napoleon—Take a tip from me and forget it. I once had that idea.

Hitler—I shall capture the British isles and destroy the British empire.

Napoleon—Would you mind repeating that?

Hitler—I shall capture the British isles and destroy the British empire. I shall be boss of Europe and of the world, the greatest conqueror of all time!

Napoleon (beckoning)—Come on in! I'll move over!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for July 28

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

WEIGHING CONSEQUENCES A Principle of Temperate Living

LESSON TEXT—Proverbs 1:7-10; Isaiah 5:11, 12, 18-23; Galatians 6:7-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.—I Timothy 4:8.

An intelligent approach to life calls for an understanding of principles governing thought and action. Our lesson for today recognizes that every act and thought of man brings consequences, either good or bad. Man himself must make the decisions of life, and what he sows he must also reap.

Matters of crucial importance to modern young people are involved in our lesson. They are asking these days, "Shall I listen to God's voice, or is that just old-fashioned nonsense? What about obeying parents? Should I drink intoxicants? 'Everybody' does—why should I be different? Of course, I don't want to be a drunkard or ruin my future life, but I'd like to have 'my fling'—can't I have it and still avoid disastrous consequences?"

The answers to these questions are in our lesson. May God help young people to find the right answers, and enable every teacher to present the truth clearly and effectively.

I. Safe Counsel (Prov. 1:7-10).

No sane person wants to make a fool of himself. He is looking for the right way and will lend his ear to good counsel. Here it is—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge" (R. V., "wisdom"). Fear of God is not a cringing terror, but a sincere appreciation of His wisdom and a desire to do His will.

The best counselors a boy or girl has are father and mother. Only a fool will pass up the golden opportunity of profiting by their experience and avoiding their mistakes, and will miss the opportunity of carrying forward their high hopes. Those who fear God and honor their parents will not be misled by the enticement of sinners (v. 10). They just will not "consent," and that settles it.

II. Steps to Ruin (Isa. 5:11, 12, 18-23).

Isaiah lived and ministered in a time of prosperity, which led to drunkenness and immorality. This in time led, as it always does, to the decay and destruction of the nation. We face similar moral conditions today. Let us not shut our eyes to the lesson so oft-repeated in history and in false security go on to national ruin.

We need outspoken and determined opposition in civic, social and religious circles to the liquor traffic and to all the vices that follow inevitably in its train. The portion of our lesson from Isaiah vividly portrays the downward path of the drinker of intoxicants. Ponder it well, young man and young woman.

III. Seedtime and Harvest (Gal. 6:7-9).

Everywhere about him man sees the inexorable operation of the law of cause and effect, of sowing and reaping, and yet he listens to the lies of Satan and of his own lustful heart and tries to convince himself that the law may be suspended in the realm of the moral and spiritual.

Sowing to the flesh always brings corruption. No matter how well educated, no matter what his position in life, or his family connection, the man who takes his first drink has started on the road to a drunkard's grave. Statistics reveal that the victims of drink come from every strata of society and every circumstance of life. Young people, the sure way to avoid the consequences is to not take the first drink.

Sowing to the Spirit brings "life everlasting." That, too, is always true. There is also another precious truth: namely, that by turning to Christ the one who has begun on the downward path may stay the ruinous hand of sin upon his life. Taking Christ as his Saviour, he finds regeneration and renewal of life.

The Works of the Lord

Praise ye the Lord. I will praise the Lord with my whole heart, in the assembly of the upright, and in the congregation. The works of the Lord are great, sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.—Psalm 111: 1, 2.

As Lambs Among Wolves

Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves. Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way. And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be unto this house.—Luke 10: 3-5.

One Point of View

If we can not hope that life will be all happiness we may, at least, secure a heavy balance on the right side.

The God Within

"God worketh in you." This implies the actual presence of God at the center of our being.

Last Saturday evening Tinley was the scene of much activity. In addition to the open air movie show, the Epworth League of the local Methodist church held an ice cream social beneath the big tree on the depot grounds.

A transient group of a religious sect drove in and stopped for awhile singing religious songs and giving religious testimony.

Adam Keuch, well known Tinley resident, fell in his home Sunday and broke his hip. He was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island and is resting as well as can be expected.

Ray Jacobs was elected commander of the Tinley Park Legion Post at the Post meeting Tuesday night.

The annual picnic of the Zion Lutheran church held Sunday afternoon on the Saenger Hall grounds was very largely attended and was a decided success in every way.

Mr. Hercourt, manager of the local Service Bakery is moving his family here from Milwaukee.

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Glenn E. Moss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Moss to Miss Wilma Boomgarden of Chicago. The wedding is to take place on August 3rd at 7 o'clock in the West Pullman Methodist church of which both are members.

RURAL MAIL BOX IMPROVEMENT WEEK

The Post office Department desires to encourage rural Patrons to improve the appearance of their property as well as the streets upon which they reside by the erection of approved mail boxes and maintaining in such a way as to be accessible to the carrier and to properly protect mail placed in them under any weather conditions.

All patrons should stencil their names on the side of the box visible to the carrier as he approaches and the box and its support should be kept neatly painted white and the box signal painted red.

In order to accomplish a betterment in the general appearance of boxes, patrons are requested to make an effort during the week of Aug. 1 to 8 to meet the suggestions outlined above and more concisely enumerated below:

1. Unpainted boxes and supports should be painted white and names stenciled on boxes in neat black letters visible to the carrier as he approaches.

2. Erect a new box if your present box is not weatherproof. The large number two boxes should be erected 46 inches above the street level, measuring from level of street to bottom of box. The small number one box should be erected 48 inches above street level.

3. Boxes along a state maintained concrete highway should be erected eight feet from the concrete measuring therefrom to the edge of the box. Boxes along other streets should be erected so as not to cause the carrier to interfere with the traffic while box is being served.

4. Approaches to boxes should be maintained with weeds cut away from around the boxes so that proper service may be maintained in all kinds of weather.

If you are in doubt as to what to do, meet your carrier and he will be glad to make suggestions.

Your cooperation in this National Campaign will be of immeasurable value to the delivery service and will greatly enhance the appearance of all property and highways.

EXTREME HEAT SLACKENS DEMAND FOR DRESSED MEATS

(Reported by John Clay & Co.)

Slackened demand for dressed meats was reflected in practically all classes of livestock last week where prices were lower, with the possible exception of yearling cattle. Torrid weather proved the main depressing influence. The heat wave carried thru early this week, but abbreviated receipts relieved the pressure on steers and lambs, while hog price changes again favored the buyer.

With the arrival of increasing supplies of grass cattle, there has been a marked drop in the average price of killing steers. This, however, is a seasonal condition. Despite the late decline, the average selling cost continues better than $1 per cwt. higher than a year earlier. Demand for stocker cattle slowed down in sympathy with the break in slaughter stock.

Handy weight butchers are commanding a premium figure in the hog trade. Sows are moving in full swing and with record stocks of lard on hand and almost practical loss of our export trade "grass widows" are meeting with slow going. The average cost of all swine, however, now exceeds that of a year ago about 25 cents per cwt. The gap between the top and average price is 75 cents per cwt. compared with $1.35 last year.

Fat lamb prices were on the down movement for three weeks until Monday's reversal. The tempo of the wool market slowed down perceptibly, consumer demand for lamb narrowed and pelt-credit allowance had to be revised downward. The price drop in killer lambs effected the market for feeder material and quotations softened 25c. Dry weather is beginning to show its effect on range lambs.

SERVE A SUCCULENT STEW
(Recipes Below)

There's something so homey and tasty about a good stew, that most folks feel cheated unless a stew of one sort or another appears on the family table fairly regularly.

There are stews and stews, of course—lamb stews with feathery light dumplings and an assortment of vegetables to add flavor (and vitamins!); hearty Mulligan stews; and stews of chicken that masquerade under all sorts of fancy names.

There are even "Cinderella Stews," which start out as leftovers and end up as a well-seasoned one-dish meal.

Remember that "serving a stew" is an economical measure, and a time-saving one, as well. Stews and meat pies usually make use of the less expensive cuts of meat. Their preparation is simple, and they make a satisfying "One-dish meal," indeed.

Lamb Stew With Mint Dumplings.
 1/4 cup butter
 2 1/2 pounds lamb (cut in pieces)
 4 cups boiling water
 1 tablespoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 3/4 cup carrots (sliced)
 3 cups potatoes (cut in cubes)
 3 onions (sliced)
 1 1/2 cups tomatoes (canned)
 1/4 cup flour
 1/4 cup cold water

Heat butter in large saucepan. Add meat and brown. Add boiling water, and seasonings; cover. When boiling, reduce heat and simmer 1 1/2 hours. Add vegetables and continue cooking slowly for 1 hour. Mix flour and water to a paste and add slowly. Cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Increase heat and when boiling vigorously add dumplings. Mint dumplings:

2 cups bread flour
 2 teaspoons baking powder
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cup lard
 2 tablespoons fresh mint or parsley (chopped)
 3/4 cup milk (approximately)

Sift together dry ingredients, cut in fat and add chopped mint. Add milk and mix gently with a fork. Drop by spoonfuls into boiling stew. Cover and continue to steam for 15 minutes without lifting the cover.

One-Dish Sunday Dinner.

For a practical, one-dish meal that can be left simmering while one is in church on Sunday, chicken rice pilaf is unsurpassed. Cut a 3-pound chicken in pieces and fry in butter to a golden brown. Add salt and pepper to taste. When nearly brown drain off all but 1/4 cup fat, add an onion, finely sliced, a little chopped parsley and 1/2 of a bay leaf and fry 10 minutes longer. Wash 2 cups rice and spread over the chicken; add 4 cups boiling water, one small sliced tomato (or 2 tablespoons canned tomatoes) and 1 teaspoon salt. Stir gently; cover, bring to a boil and then simmer for one hour. A small family might have the best parts of the chicken fried one day, and the rest cooked this way the next day, using only 1 cup of rice and 2 cups of water.

Lamb Riblet Stew.

(Serves 4 to 5)
 4 pounds lamb riblets (rib ends of breast of lamb)
 4 tablespoons fat
 3 1/2 cups water
 1 tablespoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 5 medium size onions (peeled)
 5 medium size potatoes (pared)
 3 carrots (scrapped, and cut in halves lengthwise)

Have butcher remove breast bone from breast of lamb, and cut between rib ends to form finger-like pieces. Wipe meat with a damp cloth, dry, and brown in hot fat. Drain off the fat, and add 3 1/2 cups of water to the meat. Cover, and simmer for one hour. Add seasonings and the onions, cover, and cook for 30 minutes. Then add potatoes and carrots. Cover, and cook for 30 minutes longer. Pour off the gravy, and add a tablespoon of flour mixed with 2 tablespoons of cold water to form a paste. Cook, stirring constantly, until the gravy thickens. Arrange lamb riblets in the center of a serving platter with the vegetables around the sides. Pour gravy over top.

Creole Chicken Gumbo File.
 1 4-pound chicken
 Flour, salt, pepper
 1/2 pound lean ham
 2 tablespoons lard or butter
 1 onion (chopped)
 1 sprig thyme
 1 bay leaf
 1 tablespoon parsley (minced)
 Garlic, amount you like, rub bowl
 1/4 red pepper pod, without seeds
 Boiling water
 1 dozen shrimp or more
 Creole Gumbo File

Clean and cut up chicken as for a fricassee. Dredge with flour, salt and pepper. Cut ham into small dices. Place lard or butter in soup kettle or deep stewing pot and when hot put in the chicken and ham. Cover closely and brown for 5 to 10 minutes. Then add onion, parsley, garlic and thyme, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. When nicely browned, add boiling water just to cover chicken. Add bay leaf broken very fine—and red pepper pod. Lower flame and allow Gumbo to simmer gently until chicken is tender—2 to 4 hours. Remove carcass and bones. Just before serving, add 2 dozen shrimp, diced. Heat through thoroughly. Remove from flame and add 1/2 tablespoon to 2 tablespoons of Gumbo File.

Brunswick Stew.

Put one gallon of water in a large iron pot, bring to a boil, and add one tablespoon of salt. Add one onion minced fine, one pint of shelled butter beans, six potatoes peeled and sliced, six ears of corn cut from the cob, one-half pound of fat salt pork or bacon cut into shreds, one-half teaspoon each of black and cayenne pepper. Two squirrels or one large fat hen, disjointed and soaked in cold water to draw the blood out, are next thrown into the pot. Cover closely and stew very slowly for two hours, stirring occasionally from the bottom. Stew one hour longer, add two teaspoons of white sugar and one quart of tomatoes peeled and sliced. Ten minutes before serving add one-fourth pound of butter cut into bits and rolled in flour. Bring to a boil again and serve on soup plates with dry rice. This is a dish men like and one they can excel in preparing.

Mulligan Stew.

(Serves 6)
 1 medium size corned beef—minced

1 onion—minced fine
 1 No. 2 can peas with liquid
 1 medium size bottle tomato catsup
 1 cup water
 Salt and pepper to taste

Put all ingredients in saucepan and simmer gently over low flame for about one hour. The flavor improves with the length of cooking time.

Flow of Bile Is Influenced By Exercise

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE of the things that formerly was difficult to understand was how some men ate enormous meals and had no trouble with liver or gall bladder while others who ate meals of ordinary size were troubled with indigestion, belching, desire to vomit, constipation, and other signs of a slow or sluggish liver and gall bladder. The explanation is that the heavy eater is one who is also active, takes plenty of exercise—riding, golfing, brisk walks and the other sits at his desk all day.

Nature meant that man should move about, bend his body, reach up and down, all of which not only squeezes the liver and gall bladder but also makes him breathe deeply. Deep breathing, by pressing the diaphragm (floor of chest and roof of abdomen) against the liver, squeezes it and increases the flow of bile.

Will bile not flow unless exercise is taken? Bile is manufactured and will flow down into small intestine, into gall bladder, and from gall bladder also to small intestine, even if no exercise is taken. But the amount made and rapidly with which it flows can greatly be influenced by exercise.

Over a Quart of Bile.

Just how much bile is manufactured in 24 hours and how fast it flows is recorded by Dr. I. C. Zuckerman and associates, in American Journal of Digestive Diseases. A patient with a fistula—opening in duct carrying the bile—was observed when starved and no bile taken by mouth. Over a quart of bile was manufactured in 24 hours.

In regard to the rate of flow, it was found that the hourly rate of flow during day and night was fairly regular. There was, however, a six-hour interval during night and early morning (when patient was sleeping) when there was a noticeable decrease in the bile flow.

What does this teach us? It teaches us that when the body is completely at rest, bile flow is slower than when body is active. If, several times a day we would bend the body with knees straight or take a few long breaths we could increase the bile flow and prevent constipation.

The Prevention of Stones in Kidneys

TODAY physicians are not content simply to treat kidney stone colic and remove large stones, but are studying the causes of these stones and how best to prevent these stones from forming. The Stone clinic was organized at the Massachusetts General hospital, Boston. Dr. Fuller Albright, in the New England Medical Journal, says:

"The Stone clinic represents an effort to learn more about the prevention of kidney stones by a combined study of the problem by the general physician, the chemist and the urologist (specialist in kidney and bladder diseases). There are undoubtedly many factors that influence the formation of stones—stasis (sluggish circulation), infection (from various parts of the body), lack of or insufficient amount of vitamins, lack of colloids (matter or substance in a glue-like condition), excess of crystalloids (matter or substance in a crystal form) in the urine, and so forth."

Method of Treatment.

The thought then in investigating stones is that a urine of a certain composition precipitates or manufactures a stone composed largely of the substances thrown down by or precipitated by this certain type of urine—cystine stone, uric acid stone, calcium phosphate stone. This being the case then, medical treatment consists in trying to reduce the manufacture of the substances forming the stone by the urine, or to try to change the composition of the urine so as to keep the substances solvent.

The first step in the treatment is to find out the type of stone that is present. Dr. Albright states that taking large amounts of fluids is ideal treatment for all kinds of stone.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Could gas interfere with the heart action enough to cause pain?

A.—Gas could interfere with heart action by crowding it. By avoiding foods causing the gas or bending from side to side to dislodge the gas, you should get relief from gas pressure.

Q.—I have just recovered from influenza and pneumonia and my hair has dropped out till I am nearly bald. Will it grow in again?

A.—Your hair should return within two years.

Everglades May Conceal Remnant Of Savage Tribe

Aged Seminoles Tell of a People Who Dwell in Primitive Savagery.

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.—Deep in the marshy fastnesses of the Florida Everglades the remnants of some savage and forgotten Indian tribe still dwell in primitive savagery, Seminole chieftains have told Dr. Vernon Laemme, archeologist, who is excavating Timucuan mounds near here.

They are not Seminoles, and are regarded as taboo by that nation. No Seminole will go within a quarter of a mile of the two hummocks where the strange tribe dwells, Chief Josie Jumper told Laemme.

Josie, whose great-grandfather, Chief Johnny Jumper, was imprisoned by federal troops when he came to Fort Marion under a flag of truce 100 years ago—one of the incidents that led the Seminoles to retreat into the impenetrable 'Glades and refuse to sign a peace treaty with the whites—is assisting Laemme with the excavations.

Primitive Weapons Found.

It was after seeing skeletons, pottery and primitive weapons of the fierce Timucuan that Josie revealed the presence of the mysterious tribe, and advanced the theory that they might be Timucuan.

It was the warlike Timucuan hordes that repulsed Ponce de Leon when he attempted to land at Charlotte harbor on the lower west Florida coast in 1513. There a Timucuan arrow struck down the gallant Ponce and later caused his death.

Again in 1528, when the red-bearded, one-eyed conquistador, Pamphilio de Narvaez, landed a small army near Tampa bay and attempted a northward march through mid-Florida, the Timucuan warriors so harried his ranks that he was forced to retreat to the seacoast. On the coast his men built small boats and put to sea to escape the Timucuan wrath. But the wrath of the sea was mightier still, and only four men out of the entire army lived to see Spain again.

Yielded Before De Soto.

Twelve years later, the Timucuan braves again attempted to drive out a Spanish invader, but the steel-clad troops of Hernando de Soto were too much for them. De Soto marched through their lands and to his death on the banks of the Mississippi three years later.

But the white man's guns and the white man's diseases brought doom to the once mighty Indian nation. A few survivors were rounded up in the early 1800s and sold as slaves to Cuban planters.

That's what history says. But Josie Jumper says, "Me don't think so. Maybe all gone, but bad men still in two hummocks in Everglades. They not Seminole—no wear clothes." (Seminoles are inordinately proud of their voluminous and varicolored robes, and never appear without them.) "Seminoles see their fires, but no go near. Bad men. White man never see."

Only the old men of the Seminole nation have ever actually seen the mystery Indians close up.

Grizzly Bear as Thief

Merely Timid Animal

CRANBROOK, B. C.—A grizzly bear in the big timber is a fierce beast, but when caught stealing groceries, its first instinct is to flee, according to William Stork, White Swan Lake trapper, who surprised one in his pantry.

Returning to his cabin after dark, he noticed the kitchen door open and the front door ajar. He approached cautiously with a flashlight in his hand.

Entering the front door he suddenly switched on his light and found himself facing a full-grown grizzly bear.

The bear whirled around and leaped through the nearest window, shattering glass on all sides, and fled with the window frame around its neck.

No Time for Studio Fire

Either, It Would Appear

HOLLYWOOD.—The fire alarm bursts forth with all its fearsome clangor.

"Cut!" shouts Director William Keighley to Rosalind Russell and James Stewart, who are busy in a scene for "No Time for Comedy." Screaming sirens from the outside add to the din. Warner firemen burst into the stage.

There's a sudden lull. The fire chief can't find a fire.

A sand bag up in the flies had burst, its contents striking the bell and setting off the alarm.

Everybody goes back to work. The fun is all over.

Prisoner Says Sentence

'Is Best Thing for Me'

LUDINGTON, MICH.—Herman Shoenbeck proved himself an unusually grateful prisoner when Circuit Judge Max E. Neal sentenced him to a term of from six months to four years for felonious assault.

"Thank you very much, your honor," Shoenbeck said after hearing the sentence, the minimum for his offense. "This is the best thing that ever happened to me."

'Squawk' Troublesome

"Squawk" is one of the hardest words in the language for spelling bee contestants, according to Dr. Harry Hagen, who has completed a check-up on what words cause the most casualties.

One reason people can't spell "squawk" is that they hardly ever see it in print. Squawks are heard, but seldom seen. The most common misspelling is "squak," although "squalk," "sqwawk" and "sqwaak" also occur.

"Fricassee" seems to be one of the most difficult stumblers in the language, judging from the damage it has done. Fourteen spellers went down on "fricassee" in one national contest—probably the record toll.

Now! STRONGER .. SOFTERFacial Tissue

Use One... Instead of a Handful

Are you tired of having facial tissues wad up? Are you annoyed with the way fingers go right through ordinary facial tissues—that shred and tear coming out of the box? Then you'll welcome these new, improved Test-Mark facial tissues that are so much stronger you'll use one instead of several—yet softer and more absorbent! In new, smarter boxes of 200 and 500 sheets.
